The nineteenth century Burke and Wills and Lewis and Clark expeditions in Australia and the United States respectively were amazing feats of stamina and courage. Mike's talk outlines the rationale for the expeditions and reviews their parallels while highlighting some of the incredible events that occurred during them.

Mike Dorahy has a Master of Science degree from Monash University and had a long and happy career in the Information Technology industry. He is on the committee of the Burke and Wills Historical Society. During 2015 he spent three weeks following the Burke and Wills track from Melbourne to the Gulf of Carpentaria.
